History of Purdue University Rules and Regulations Governing Students

This particular collection contains examples of some of Purdue's earliest rules and regulations governing students. Their intent has remained the same over time.

As per the most recent web site, "Student Regulations provide information for all Purdue students on the structure, policy, regulations, and procedures of the University that govern their relationship to the University in both academic and personal progress toward their ultimate educational goals. It is designed as a reference, with direct quotations from the University Code where applicable, covering the basic areas relating to all students on the campus."

Collection Description

Scope

The Purdue University Rules and Regulations Governing Students collection (circa 1880-1950; 0.4 cubic feet) documents some of the earliest Purdue student rules and regulations. Among the collection are various "Rules and Regulations Governing Students" brochures; pledge forms regulating behavior, "Matriculation Regulations and Pledge," a 1913 Regulations for the Government of Athletics and "Manual of the Corps of Instruction," 1914.

Some of the unique rules and regulations found in the collection are; Dormitory Regulations from 1890; "Rules and Regulations Governing living in the Franklin Levering Cary Memorial Hall," the first building of Cary Quadrangle (i.e. students could purchase 2 pillow cases and 4 sheets for $5.00, and the University would launder those); the first rules governing motor vehicle usage (1936), "Regulations Relative to Students Operating Motor Vehicles While Attending Purdue University" and a 1939 "Honor and Honesty" brochure. There is also a handbook titled, "You Have the Ball! It's Up To You," which contains illustrations done by Harold Gray, Purdue '17, creator of Little Orphan Annie.

Types of materials include: by-laws, brochures, a constitution, forms, manuals, and pamphlets related to rules and regulations governing students.
